

James W. Nemitz, Ph.D. is the 7th president of the West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine, where he has also served as vice president for administration and external relations, associate dean for preclinical education, and professor of anatomy during his 35 years with the school. Dr. Nemitz received his B.S. in Biology from Randolph-Macon College, Ph.D. in Anatomy from the Medical College of Virginia, and was a postdoctoral fellow in neuroscience at the Yale University School of Medicine. Dr. Nemitz has been the recipient of numerous awards and honors, including Educator of the Year by the American Osteopathic Foundation (2002) and West Virginia Professor of the Year (1999)

Jim is excited to be partnering with the Board in making White Sulphur Springs the healthiest community in WV. The Family Activity Center is an exciting chapter in his career, and he has accepted the challenge to bring WVSOM students to the Center to serve as role models and consultants for the patrons.
